

notes

- According to AISC by-laws all applicants must enter AISC membership at the highest level of membership they qualify for. Persons who are employed by non-member firms that qualify for Full or Associate membership are ineligible for Affiliate membership.
- AISC membership dues are not deductible as charitable contributions for federal tax purposes; however, they may be deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense.

The undersigned agrees that, if duly elected to Affiliate Membership in the American Institute of Steel Construction, the firm will abide by the terms of said Institute's Certificate of Incorporation and of its by-laws, together with all lawful resolutions adopted by the Members of said Institute or by its Board of Directors or by its Executive Committee and which shall be in force and effect with respect to the firm. It is further understood that, if elected as Affiliate Member, the enclosed dues will be for the annual membership dues. In the event membership is denied, the payment will be refunded in total. By becoming a member of AISC you agree to receive email from AISC concerning the structural steel industry, AISC activities, and events.

annual dues structure

Number of members	Fee
1	$140
2-6	$175
7-19	$225
20-99	$350
100-499	$650
500-1,000	$1,250

Signature (primary contact) _____

Primary contact (please print) _____

Title _____ Date _____

You may join as an individual (a "firm" of one) or have your company join and pay substantially reduced fees for each additional person (if six people from one company join together they pay the equivalent of $29.17 each; if 50 people from one company join, they pay the equivalent of just $7 each).